The work of cleaning up the city should be begun at once. There has been no rain for at least two months, and the gutters and streets have become clogged with fifth and dirt. Should the pestilence that is now so fearfully raging in Memphis reach Lexington in its present condition the result would be fearful, and numbers of persons would fill untimely graves. It behooves every clitzen to act in this matter at once. Report every locality that requires cleaning to the Health Department, and see that your own residences are thoroughly renovated, and all filth and dirt removed. The dark days of 1833 and 1849, when the cholera carried so many people to the grave, should be remembered. Whillst there may be no probable danger, yet it is possible that the yellow fever may reach the city. Our city papers and physicians are warning you and the matter must not be delayed. Finally, at the bottom of the wall, statues begin to appear of exquisite workmanship, together with busts, herme, bas-reliefs, &c. The stratifica-tion of these marbles shows that at the time when the foundation wall was be-ing constructed there was in the paighing constructed there was in the neigh-borhood a shrine, a temple, a fountain or some such monument, in good preservation and profusely ornamented. The masons first took advantage of whatever was movable without difficulty, and a cordingly we find the statues at the bot-tom of the trench. Then they put their hands on what was half movable, and this is the reason why columns, capitals &c., are found in the middle strata. A further want of materials obliged them to attack at last the building itself, its steps, thresholds, &c.
